COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA EMPLOYED IN PHILIPPINES

Attempts Are Made To Incite Labor To Uprising

SEE SOVIET MOVE

Secret Papers Sent From Chicago Found

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, August 8.—It is officially announced that secret documents from Chicago Communist associations, believed to be affiliated with the Russian Soviet, have been received here, outlining a plan to incite Filipino laborers to rise and make war against their landlords and employers without distinction of race. The documents state that the Filipino landlord class is the chief obstacle to the freedom of the workers.

It is understood that the names of prominent Filipinos against whom direct action was to be taken are contained in the documents, but these have not been divulged officially.

The news created a sensation here. It is now thought that the recent scout mutiny may have originated from radical influences in the United States.

10 PCT. SURTAX IS ASKED FOR FLOOD RELIEF

Additional Customs Levy To Be Requested By Peking

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, August 8.—At the Cabinet meeting today, five items for raising flood relief-funds proposed by the Ministry of Finance were decided upon, important items being as follows:

(1) Ten percent surtax on the import and export duties at Chinese Maritime Customs throughout the country shall be levied.

(2) Ten percent surtax on the duties which are now being collected at customs in the interior, the freight taxation office of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and other taxation offices throughout the country, shall be levied.

(3) The term during which the above surtaxes are to be levied, shall be from six months to one year.

As for the surtax to be levied through the Maritime Customs, it will be enforced by the Ministry of Finance subject to approval by the Diplomatic Body.

Waichiaopu Gets Plea Of Shanghai In Fight On Arms

According to the Chinese press, the Waichiaopu has acknowledged receipt of a telegram sent by the Amalgamated Association of Street Unions of Shanghai in which the request was made that the Waichiaopu confer with members of the diplomatic corps with a view to obtaining more drastic penalties for those convicted of smuggling arms into China. The Waichiaopu states that it has detailed deputies to approach the members of the diplomatic body in the matter.

Progress Is Made At Conference In London; Agreement On Reports

German Request That Dawes Plan Be Made Effective On October 5th Is Agreed To; Stresemann And Herriot Meet

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 7.—It was authoritatively announced at the conclusion of today's sitting of the Reparations Conference that considerable progress had been made.

The Germans agreed to consider the loan as a moral obligation, thereby satisfying one of the Reparation Commission's essential conditions for the enforcement of the Dawes plan.

It is also stated that the Dawes plan, on the request of the Germans, will be put into operation on Oct. 5 instead of on Oct. 15.

Further progress has been made in connection with the discussion of the reports of the First and Second Committees, on which agreement has virtually been reached.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, August 7.—Although the memorandum presented by the Germans containing observations on the reports of the three committees has not been published, the British papers give some indications regarding its contents. The letter sent makes allusion to the question of the evacuation of military forces in the Ruhr. The most important matter dealt with, however, is in connection with the report of the second committee dealing with the economic evacuation, and envisages measures of pardon for condemned Germans.

The heads of the Allied delegations and the Germans met together this morning. Chancellor Marx gave an explanation in regard to the observations contained in the memorandum presented by the Germans.

A further conference will take place this evening, and will be devoted to hearing the report of the Allied experts on the German observations. Discussion will then take place regarding the question of defaults, which will be resumed on the following morning.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 8.—A notable event took place in London yesterday on the occasion of the French and German Ministers meeting and conversing without witnesses for the first time since the war. Herr Marx and Dr. Stresemann visited M. Herriot at Hyde Park Hotel and later the French Premier returned the visit at the Ritz Hotel. It is believed that in the course of the interviews the foundation was laid for the launching of negotiations on the subject of the military evacuation of the Ruhr.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, August 7.—The German memorandum has again brought up for discussion a number of points already settled by the Allies, principally concerning deliveries in kind and transfers. The general impression of the French press is that this is a manoeuvre on the part of the Germans for the purpose of obtaining a more rapid military evacuation of the Ruhr. The Committee of experts have examined the German memorandum. It was decided to leave to a committee of four the matter of deciding questions having the character of political recommendations, and the advice of the experts having been given to the Allied council, discussion with the German delegates commenced.

UPROAR STARTS AS PEKING ASKS VOTE ON DR. YEN

Opposition In House Kick Up Tremendous Row; Force Adjournment

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Aug. 8.—There were 384 members present at the meeting of the House of Representatives this afternoon when the principal item on the agenda was the vote on the election of Dr. Yen as Premier. The Government supporters moved the vote accordingly. The opposition thereupon overturned their chairs and generally kicked up a tremendous row which continued until the speaker announced his inability to restore order and adjourned the house.

SINO-RUSSIAN MEETING WILL BEGIN AUG. 15

Marshal Chang Tso-lin Makes Own Agreement With Karakhan

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Aug. 8.—The Waichiaopu says that the Sino-Russian Conference will begin between August 15 and August 20, probably on August 15.

The Soviet Government has not yet ratified the Sino-Russian Agreement but the Soviet Assembly passed it on July 31. The Moscow Central Executive Committee is now considering it and it is expected that it will be ratified shortly.

It is officially stated that Marshal Chang Tso-lin and M. Karakhan have reached an agreement which accords with the Sino-Russian Agreement with some slight modification and that this will facilitate the forthcoming negotiations in Peking.

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, August 8.—It is learned from a reliable Chinese source that the Russo-Chinese agreement will be ratified and exchanged in Peking on the 11th instant, inasmuch as the said agreement was approved on July 31 by the Central Executive Committee at Moscow. It is expected that the formal Russo-Chinese conference will be opened on or about the 15th instant.

Catholic Convert Branded "K. K."

Nelson Burroughs, formerly a Protestant, but now organizer of the Knights of Columbus in Rochester, N. H., declares these marks on his chest and forehead were seared there with a red-hot iron by a gang of masked men who kidnaped him in an automobile and carried him to a shack, presumably near Haverhill, Mass., from which he declares he escaped after being a prisoner for 17 days. He asserted he had received letters warning him to return to the Protestant church, and that he was branded for refusing. The authorities declared they believed his story in its entirety.

Russian Legation Chapel Has Historic Background

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Aug. 5.—In view of current rumours that the Russian Legation Chapel—probably the oldest foreign landmark in Peking—is to be devoted to other purposes when the Soviet Ambassador takes over the Legation premises, the following historical sketch of the Chapel, which has been supplied to Reuter's Agency, is of topical interest.

Some Russian Cossacks having been made prisoners in the Russo-Chinese skirmishes on the Amur, which led to the Norchisk Treaty of 1699, they were, on account of their fighting abilities, included in the Yellow Banner of the Manchu Emperor's guard at Peking. One of the conditions upon which these "Albazines," as they are known, agreed to enlist provided that their spiritual needs should be attended to, and a chapel was therefore given them in the north-east corner of the city, where the Russian Ecclesiastical Mission now stands.

Later on, after the Bura Kiakta treaties between Russia and China had been concluded [illegible] granting [illegible] rights of permanent residence to a Greek Orthodox Mission in Peking, another compound was given to the Mission on Chiao Min Hsiang (now Legation Street). This compound appears to have been the place of residence of some of the earliest Portuguese and Dutch Embassies to Peking, then of the early Russian Embassies (including that of Boyar Baykoff in 1657), and later of the first Russian trading caravans.

As the Chinese Government could not permit another Power to erect buildings and maintain paid servants in China at that time, the members of the Russian Church Mission were given official salaries and later grants of land and officials rank. A chapel for the Russian Mission was erected, at the Chinese Government's expense, during the reign of the Emperor Yung-Cheng (1722 to 1735) —the very Emperor who so bitterly persecuted the Jesuits.

The Chapel was damaged by fire and earthquake in the early 19th century but it is quite likely that the doubleheaded eagle on it may be the very one which was put up when the Chapel was founded under the Russian Empress Anne (1730-1770). An inscription on the quaint belfry attests improvements made in the "Nan Kuan's" (Southern Hostelry's) property in the 18th century, as also do inscriptions on the bells.

When a Russian Legation was established in Peking after the Tientsin Treaty of 1858, Court Ignatieff took over the "Southern Hostelry" for the Legation's use, the Ecclesiastical Mission going back to its original quarters in the "Northern Hostelry" (Pei Kuan). Both were substantially enlarged after 1900. The Chapel thus became de facto the Legation Chapel, although there was no arrangement by which the Ecclesiastical Mission relinquished its rights over it—rights granted, legally speaking, to an independent clerical body.

The old Nan Kuan included a portion of the Russian Legation between the drive to the Minister's house and the First Secretary's House, comprising the Chapel, Dr. Sondakoff's house and the red "Ting 'erh" in the garden.

U. S. Estimates On Wheat Crop Prove La Follette's Claim

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Washington, August 8.—The United States Department of Agriculture, in its August crop report, estimates the total American wheat yield at 814,000,000 bushels as compared with 786,000,000 bushels last year.

The August estimate of the Department seems to bear out the claim made by United States Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, Progressive candidate for the Presidency, that the Department erred seriously in its July estimate, when it forecasted a total crop of 740,000,000 bushels.

The figures just announced coincide with the claim made by Senator La Follette following announcement of the July forecast. The low figures in the July forecast were followed by a sharp rise in the wheat market.

Fast Trip Made By Empress of Asia

An average speed of 19.72 knots per hour was attained by the Canadian Pacific Steamer Empress of Asia on its last journey from Yokohama, according to advices received yesterday by Mr. A. Parkhill, acting general agent for the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., in Shanghai.

The Empress of Asia left Yokohama at noon on July 12 and arrived in Vancouver at 4 p.m., July 20.

YOUNG NORWEGIAN DEAD FROM OPIUM POISONING HERE

Police Hunt Opium-Seller; Three Suspects In Court

The Norwegian Consulate-General is investigating the sudden death Thursday morning of Olaf Gudmundsen, 24-year-old Norwegian sailor, who succumbed after an illness of only half-an-hour in his room at the Savoy Hotel. A post mortem examination conducted by Dr. R. N. McKinstry showed that death was caused by opium poisoning.

Ludwigsen, who was a member of the crew of the American Schooner W. H. Talbot, which arrived in port here several weeks ago, was taken ill suddenly at about 10:30 a.m. Thursday. Dr. T. B. Dunn was immediately called and arrived at the hotel shortly afterwards. On examining Ludwigsen, Dr. Dunn found that life was already extinct.

After Dr. McKinstry and Mr. N. Aall had viewed the body, it was removed to the Mortuary, where Dr. McKinstry, at the request of the Norwegian Consul Mr. Aall, conducted the post mortem examination which showed opium poisoning to be the cause of death.

Following up the case, the authorities found that the deceased had bought the opium from a place on Woosung Road. The Norwegian Consul asked that the place be located, and with the assistance of some of Ludwigsen's friends this was done. Van Fooloong, a watchman, was arrested there, and stated that the Norwegian had bought the opium from a man occupying a room in the house. On the way to the station he pointed out a man who he said was the friend of the opium-seller, and they went together to the house of a young woman, the wife of the man accused of selling the stuff to the sailor.

All three were kept in custody, and appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday before Mr. Whitamore, British Assessor, and Magistrate Yui, where F.C.C. Oldis set forth the case, stating that the principal had not yet been arrested and asking for a remand in order to permit further inquiries and the arrest of other parties concerned.

The Court ordered a remand for one week, the three accused to be released on bail of $150 each.

It will be remembered that the schooner Talbot, of whose crew Ludwigsen was a member, gained considerable notoriety on its arrival here two months ago by reason of the big haul of arms and ammunition seized aboard it by the Customs officials. Captain N. Borreson is the master of the vessel.

PARLIAMENT IS ADJOURNED WITHOUT TAKING VOTE ON ANGLO-SOVIET AGREEMENT

Promise Of Premier MacDonald That Commons Will Have Full Opportunity To Inspect Treaties Before Any Binding Action Is Taken Halts Movement Of Opposition To Bring About Fall Of Ministry

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 7.—Parliament has adjourned until September 30.

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 7.—M. Rakovsky, interviewed today, said that the treaty was an immense step forward. It was the first time that the Soviet Government had given its pledge to satisfy the interests of the different categories of British claimants who had lost by the revolution. He said that it was a profound mistake to consider the proposed loan as a concession entirely favouring Russia. Without it any extension of Anglo-Russian trade would be impossible; but the political side of the treaty was far more important than the economic. It renewed Anglo-Russian friendship on a solid foundation.

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 7.—Parliament, which should have adjourned yesterday was forced to meet in consequence of the vigorous Conservative and Liberal opposition to the Russian treaty yesterday evening.

At the outset of the debate today the Opposition secured a ruling by the Speaker that the abortive draft treaty on which the Russian negotiations broke down must be published.

Sir Robert Horne (Conservative) evoked angry Ministerial cries and Opposition cheers by urging that the agreed draft treaty should not be signed till Parliament had reassembled.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald said he wished to sign the treaty today. The Prime Minister emphasised that signature of the treaty did not involve the sanction of the House of Commons. The Government pledged themselves to produce the treaties and lay them before Parliament for acceptance or rejection. They were anxious that not a clause, provision or line of the treaties should be operative until the House had sanctioned them. The House, in fairness, ought to allow the agreement to be signed; otherwise an extraordinary and intolerable precedent would be established. He could not assent to it. The Opposition were

$100,000 ASKED TO REPATRIATE RUSS REFUGEES

Big Sum Requested For Men Aboard Volunteer Ships Here

In a joint telegram to the Peking Government, General Ho Feng-ling, Defense Commissioner for Shanghai and Sungkiang, and Mr. Hsu Yuan, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, have asked for an appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose of repatriating the 600 Russians now on board the Volunteer ships here, according to the Chinese press.

In their telegram, General Ho and Mr. Hsu pointed out that members of the gentry and leading merchants here had urged extra care in the supervision of the men aboard the Volunteer ships. They suggested that it would be best to place a close watch on the men and to repatriate them. The sum of $100,000 would be needed for this purpose, they said, and they asked Peking to take steps to obtain it for them.

The Waichiaopu is said to have approved the plan in principle and to have requested the Finance Ministry to take steps to raise the required money.

YALE-IN-CHINA WILL BE GIVEN $30,000 YEARLY

Money Will Be Paid Out Of Returned Boxer Indemnity

Peking, August 5.—The Yale College in Changsha, known as "Yale-in-China College," will receive from now on $30,000 annually from the returned portion of the American Boxer Indemnity, instead of from the Customs revenue as before. It may be recalled that it was passed at a Cabinet meeting some months ago that the Yale College in China was to enjoy a yearly subsidy from the Peking Government to be paid out of the Customs revenue. This has been done so far. At the recommendation of the Director of the Chinese Customs Administration, who suggests that subsidy can from now on be paid out of the returned American Boxer Indemnity so as to release the Customs service funds for other urgent purposes, the Peking Government has changed its mind and decides to make use of a share of the American indemnity for the benefit of the Changsha College.

Some time ago, there had been talk about amalgamating the "Yale-in-China College" with the University of Wuchang—better known to the foreigners as Boone University. Dr. Edward H. Hume a Yale man who has been the man behind the Changsha College, was in favor of the combination—not only to save running expenses but also to provide facilities which Yale alone in Changsha cannot afford to provide yet for some years. He took a trip to the United States, to consult financial supporters as to their views and opinions on the matter. It developed later that there was opposition to the combination. Some preferred to combine the medical department, while other suggested that the college department combine with Boone University. Owing to this divided opinion, nothing has been carried out, and the Peking Government will continue its anual subsidy of $30,000.

Mill Coolie Gets Three Years For Serious Assault

The young mill coolie who was arrested July 21 for a serious assault on a girl and man, also workers at the mill, with a knife and a chopper, appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday before Mr. Martin, British Assessor, and Magistrate Zau for sentence, his case having been remanded until the complainants were able to leave hospital and appear in Court.

The young woman stated in Court yesterday that the defendant, Tsang, had been asking her repeatedly to go out with him, but she refused. Early in the morning of July 21 he came to the filature armed with a knife, and attacked her witnout any reason whatever. She had been sixteen days in hospital.

The male complainant said that Tsang had cut and stabbed him with a knife and chopper. The men had quarreled before but he knew no reason why Tsang should have stabbed him. He also has been detained in hospital.

The defendant that the male complainant had attacked him first, coming into his room and asking him if he had been playing about with the girl and warning him not to make love to her, then stabbing him on the wrist.

The Court sentenced the defendant to three years' imprisonment, with confiscation of the weapons.

Mr. Williams Guest Of Honor At Tiffin Given By Journalists

Today, Mr. Williams will again be guest at a tiffin to be given by the local Chinese newspapers at the Kung Teh Ling Vegetarian Restaurant on Peking Road. Mr. Williams will sail for the States on the President Jackson on Sunday to resume his studies in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, where he will be senior.

Chinese Sentenced For Bribery In The Mixed Court Here

A Chinese was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for attempted bribery at the Mixed Court here yesterday, Mr. Martin, British Assessor, and Magistrate Zau presiding. Mr. Maitland appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Fleming for the defense.

The case rested wholly on the unsupported evidence of C.P.C. 214. The constable said the defendant had come up to him Thursday afternoon and given him $2, saying it was opium money, and after some talk he had arrested the man. The defendant, on the other hand, said he had been stopped by the constable while passing the International Dispensary on the day mentioned and searched, the constable taking the $2 from his pocket. Both men, under cross-examination, told rather confused stories, and there was no witness to corroborate either of them in connection with the charge itself.

Assessor Martin, in pronouncing sentence, stated that the case depended upon the evidence of the Chinese constable, but that he had decided to accept his evidence against that of the accused man, who was sentenced to a year's imprisonment, with the $2 involved to go to the Poor Box.

Through Chinese Eyes

THE REAL DOMESTIC WAR

"Today, the real domestic war in China is not between the North and the South nor between Chihli and Fengtien, still less between the government and anti-government factions. Briefly speaking, there are two cause for domestic clash:

"First, the struggle for funds between Peking and the other provinces.

"Second, the struggle for money between the Parliamentarians and the people in the provinces.

"These are real domestic wars and are being waged all the time and in all places, unlike the fight between the North and the South or the Chihli and the Fengtien clique, which are merely warfare in name and not in actuality.

"Whenever, Peking formulates a plan to raise some money, the various provinces all want to have a finger in the pie. The demands of the provinces are always ignored by Peking. In the struggle, the provinces generally come out ahead, but Peking meanwhile has to concentrate all its energy to resist the provincial demands.

"The Parliamentarians were elected manifestly to look after the interest of the people. But today they are the tools of officialdom and are enemies of the people. When the officials fail to accommodate them, they turn round and grab their jobs. While they remain as Parliamentarians they openly enjoy all the benefits which were meant for their constituents, the people.—Shun Pao.

RAILWAY FUNDS

That the construction of more railways will facilitate communication, and help to develop China's rich natural resources and promote commerce is denied by nobody. General Wu is speaking the truth when he says several tens of millions of dollars will be available from the receipts of the railways. But it is a question whether this money will not be seized by the militarists to defray military expenses or squandered by others.

The Kin-Han and Kin-Sui Railways are money-making enterprises. But where are the profits they have made? Actually, the railways have today to borrow money from others. Their money has been squeezed at one time by the corrupt officials and seized at another time by the unscrupulous militarists. More money earned by the building of more railways will only go to finance the civil war conducted by the militarists and bring further calamities on the masses. So we say that unless the political question is solved nothing can be done.—The Shanghai Tribune.

THE PRESIDENT'S GUARDS

Ten days have elapsed since the policeman was killed by President Tsao Kun's guards, and the culprits have not yet been identified and punished. At first it was said that President Tsao favored severe punishment of his guards, but now we learn that he does not want to bother about it, in spite of public indignation. If the murdered man were one of the President's guards and not a policeman we are sure that the Peking military and police authorities would have hunted in every corner for the culprits. And if the man were one of the common people and not a policeman, we are also sure that the military and police authorities would adopt a different attitude. It seems that law is not applicable to the soldiery, much less to the guards of the President.—The Eastern Times.

BOXER FUNDS

It is in a friendly spirit and out of good will that the Indemnity Powers waive their claims to the Boxer Indemnity. In order to show appreciation of their goodwill we must make good use of the funds. Today there are many proposals made regarding the application of these funds. Some want them for the promotion of education, others for the construction of railways and still other for conservancy work. This is a very difficult question to solve. It seems as if the matter should be publicly discussed in order to find the best way to dispose of the money. It should be devoted to such public enterprises as will benefit all people. It is bad policy to divide the funds for various purposes, for in that way nothing great can be accomplished in the long run.—The Journal of Commerce.

ASIATIC ALLIANCE

The U. S. Immigration Bill is purely an economic question and not a racial question as the Japanese try to make it appear to be. This and the confusion of an alliance of the Asiatic peoples urged by the Japanese are two entirely different things. When America was in need of cheap labor for the development of her vast territory she welcomed Japanese laborers. Now she does not want them any more. For economic reasons she exclud snot only the yellow Japanese but also the negroes, and even white people.

The alliance of Asiatic peoples is another question that concerns all the peoples of Asia. But we are rather at a loss to understand how the Japanese can profess friendship for the Chinese people when they are treating the Chinese in Japan as the Americans do the Japanese in the United States. We should think it premature for the Japanese to urge the conclusion of an alliance of Asiatics. They should first help China to remove her national disgrace before Japan can remove hers. Until all peoples in Asia have recovered their independence and freedom no alliance between them is possible. The Japanese should devote their energy to this task first. If they can accomplish this task the anti-Japanese problem in America will naturally be solved. But under existing circumstances it is impossible for the Japanese to convince anybody of the possibility of forming a big alliance amongst the peoples of Asia.—The China Times.

Chinese Agitate Against Japanese Immigration Rules

That various Chinese organisations are threatening to demand counter-action against Japanese in China because of the enforcement by the Japanese Government of measures restricting the landing of Chinese laborers in Japan was stated by Huh Zao-sien, representative of the Chinese Immigrants Association in a conference with Japanese Vice-Consul Nagaoka, according to the Chinese press.

Huh came to Shanghai as the delegate of the immigrants' organisation to protest against the restrictive measures. He declared that a movement was on foot amongst various Chinese bodies to urge the Canton government and the various provincial governments to enforce similar restrictions against Japanese and to break off economic relations unless the restrictive legislation were suspended.

Vice-Consul Nagaoka is said to have promised to communicate with his government regarding the matter.

Offer $500 Reward In $1500 Holdup

Notification of the offer of a reward of $500 for the recovery of $1,500 in cash stolen from an employe of the Chia Loh Pawnshop on August 4 is contained in a letter addressed by the Haining Road Street Union to the West Hongkew police, according to the Chinese press. A suitable reward is also offered for the capture of the robber.

The pawnshop employe was on the way to a bank to deposit the money when he was attacked, knocked down and robbed near the Yang Ka Cemetery. Passersby placed him on a ricsha and sent him back to the shop.

The shopkeepers suspect a man who had been in the shop, had seen the money given to the coolie for deposit in the bank, and had left shortly after the coolie.

Keio-Shanghai Series Will Commence Today

Both Teams Ready To Go At 4:15; Gallopers Out To Win; Scott And Hamasaki Probable Hurlers

The crack Keio baseball nine will open their six game series here this afternoon at the Race Course ground when the umpire will call for play at about 4.15.

Just as the big series of the year is on hand the Shanghai boys have to encounter the worst of luck which happens to be the departure of Freddie Bullard the flashy shortstop for the Gallopers who is on his way to Mukden and will probably be away for the whole series. Although this streak of bad luck looks serious it will give Manager Gallop a chance to try out this new Mr. Shephard who has been out to practices quite regular and looks good in the field while he can sure crack them out when at bat.

As for pitchers the Gallopers are fairly well stocked up with good hurlers for with either Scott or Taylor to work the opening game there will be Claire to hurl on Sunday and if Taylor does not pitch today then he will go on Tuesday, then with today's hurler back in shape for Thursday and so on.

For the visitors Hamasaki will probably do the mound work for the collegians this afternoon and maybe tomorrow for like the other Nipponese teams which have visited Shanghai they have one strong pitcher whom they work in every game. However the Keio boys have two or three hurlers and may use them all.

The schedule for the games is as follows:

Today—4.15 p.m.
Tomorrow—4.15 p.m.
Tuesday—4.45 p.m.
Thursday—4.45 p.m.
Saturday (August 16) 4.15 p.m.
Sunday (August 17) 4.15 p.m.

YACHTING TOMORROW

The Shanghai Yacht Club will hold their second Challenge Cup race tomorrow when they will leave Shanghai for a 22 mile race down river and continuing out over the bar.

The boats will start from the Police Hulk Line at ten o'clock after the first signal at 9:55. The course will be down river out over the bar leaving Lismore Buoy on the starboard hand but rounding the Quarantine buoy to portside and back to a finish at the Woosung Customs Hulk where the time will be taken.

Owing to the lateness of tide there will be no race back to Shanghai so the yachts will return independently. The ebb tide begins at Shanghai about 10:20 a.m. and the flood makes Woosung about 5:05 p.m.

Clay Pigeon Shoot

There will be a competition on Sunday the 10th instant, at 4 p.m. for the "ninth" leg on the Club Cup.

Members are reminded that the "Canuck" Cup is being competed for during August and that a competitor, to qualify for the Cup must shoot on four of the five Sundays.

CULTIVATE A GIFT OF BEING A GOOD LISTENER

Do not seek to impress a wise man with how wise you are; listen to him that you may become more wise.

Is it not a fact that you talk too much anyway?

It is an exceptional opportunity to be able to listen to a man from who you can learn something, so why waste the time with your own talk?

It is all too true that you give yourself very little time o learn from others because you do so much talking yourself.

You prattle along without thought and consequently say little of value or benefit to anyone, certainly not to yourself.

In most cases you have talked so much without thinking that you find it difficult to find words when you wish to express yourself nicely and intelligently when in the society of those who think first and speak after.

You have a slovenly way of allowing your sentences to run together or remain unfinished, with a result that even when you make a short speech or when you try to carry on a conversation with learned people you are dull and uninteresting, though you try to be the reverse.

It is a gift that anyone can have, to be a good listener.

unable to point to a single thing that would come into operation as the result of the mere signature of the Government to the treaty.

The whole Liberal front bench, including Mr. Lloyd George, left the House at this point, presumably to consult regarding their attitude.

Mr. MacDonald, after pointing out that the House had had to accept or reject the Lausanne Treaty as it stood, gave a pledge that the Government would not follow the Lausanne precedent. They would not insert a clause that every word, line and provision of the present treaty must be accepted en bloc or rejected altogether. The House could amend, consider, pass or reject what had been done.

The Prime Minister particularly urged the Conservatives not, rashly on the last day on the session, to set a precedent in regard to the negotiations.

Mr. E. D. Morel (Labor) said that the whole of the Labor Members enthusiastically supported the Prime Minister in refusing to be placed in a position of inferiority in negotiations as compared with his predecessors. He characterised Mr. Lloyd George's attitude in attacking the treaty and pretending to sympathise with the Russian people as revolting.

Sir Robert Horne stated that the world's belief that the signature of British Ministers would be confirmed by the House of Commons obviously did not appertain to the case of a minority Government.

Mr. MacDonald interrupted, pointing out that he had pledged that this treaty could be amended.

Mr. Jowitt (Liberal), while criticising the treaty, indicated that the Liberals were not likely to support the Conservatives in their effort to delay the signature.

The Prime Minister then left the House.

Mr. Clynes asserted the constitutional right of the Government to complete the initial stage in an honest endeavor to restore Anglo-Russian relations. He appealed to the House to pass to adjournment discussion.

Later.—The Russian debate fizzled out when Mr. Lloyd George supported the appeal of Mr. Clynes to discuss adjournment.

(Reuter's Service)

Mr. Lloyd George said that the grounds for yesterday's evening's adjournment had been complied with when the Prime Minister stated that the treaties would be available to the House of Commons. He therefore supported Mr. Clynes's appeal that the House should discuss adjournment.

The House of Commons thereupon passed the third reading of the Consolidated Fund Bill, finally passing the financial provisions for the year.

It is unlikely that any vote as regards Russia that the Opposition may press during the adjournment debate will have any political significance, even if the Liberals supported the Conservatives, which is unlikely; consequently the Russian debate is virtually dead. A vote is unlikely.

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 7.—Parliament adjourned after a brief resumption of the Russian debate initiated by Mr. Lloyd George, who challenged Mr. Ponsonby to state a single subject of dispute settled by this so-called treaty, and opposed guaranteeing a loan to Russia.

Mr. Ponsonby replied that the agreement secured for the House of Commons every right and safeguard. They were making a satisfactory beginning by establishing machinery giving an inducement to the Soviet Government to settle rapidly, because not a penny would be guaranteed until all points of the agreement had been settled.

Asked what would be the amount of the loan, Mr. Ponsonby replied that loan negotiations would only be possible after a second treaty. He was unable to give the House any idea what it would be. It was for the Government to judge the amount when liabilities had been satisfied.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 8.—A study of the text of the proposed treaties with the Soviet led to the conclusion in several quarters that they are more in the nature of agreements to try to arrange treaties than treaties. Renewed opposition at their ratification is certain on the reassembling of Parliament.

Moscow, August 7.—Replying to an invitation to send a Trade Union delegation to Russia in order to establish closer communication between British and Russian labor, Mr. Purcell, Chairman of the Trade Union Congress, states that he has arranged personally to visit Russia at the beginning of next year, and perhaps sooner. He declares that it is his conviction that the Russian and British trade union movements are approaching a united front.

Paris, August 8.—M. Pertinax, discussing the Anglo-Russian Agreement in the Tcho De Paris, says that just when everything indicated a rupture in the Anglo-Russian Conference, Franco-Russian conversations were opened by the French as a starting point to seriously considering restoration of the warships brought to France by General Wrangel. The news leaked out whereupon protests were raised. Meanwhile, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald advised of the efforts of the French Ministry, decided to renew the pourparlers with the Russians.

Prevarication Test Between Two Sikhs

In the British Police Court yesterday morning, before Mr. G. W. King, the case was heard of Ratton Singh vs. Kallu, the former suing the latter for money alleged to be due him for work as watchman.

Rattan said that Kallu was a go-between, a "watchman's middleman," and had given him some work watching vessels in port here, giving him service tickets as evidence of his work, these tickets to be presented when receiving payment. Kallu, however, said the plaintiff, had refused to recognise his own labor tickets, of which Rattan exhibited 25, entitling him, he said, to $25.

Kallu, on his part, denied having issued any such tickets. They had been manufactured by complainant himself, he alleged, and were fraudulent.

The Court decided that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case. There was certainly some deliberately lying involved, but Rattan had not proved that the tickets were issued by the defendant and therefore the case must be dismissed, judgment being for the defendant.

A good deal of interest was aroused in Singapore recently by the appearance of a motor rikisha. The body of the rikisha was of the ordinary type—it had probably seen service behind a puller at one time or another in its history—but the human method of propulsion was displaced by the engine and forepart of an ordinary motor cycle. A passenger was riding in the riksha.

Two foreign youngsters, little Miss Hammond and her elder brother, of about nine and eleven years of age respectively, were the complainants in the Mixed Court yesterday against a Chinese charged with larceny. The little girl was standing at the corner of Nanking and Chekiang Roads waiting for a street-car Thursday when the man snatched her hand-bag and ran. The girl called out to her brother, who took after the man and caught him, holding him until the police came. The boy then went back and picked up the bag, which the man had thrown away when trying to escape. In Court yesterday the defendant pleaded guilty, and said he had had nothing to eat for two days previous to his crime. He was sentenced to two months imprisonment with expulsion from the Settlement.

Science Society Of China Urges Use Of Indemnities For Educational Research

In order to co-ordinate the work of promoting education and culture with the aid of the returned Boxer indemnities from America, England, Russia and Japan, a concrete plan has been suggested by the Science Society of China in a lengthy manifesto which it has just issued. The society consists of a membership of western returned students and its opinion should be of great value to those interested in educational work in China. The message, which is being broadcasted throughout the nation, urges an extensive program on educational research work.

A translation of the text of the manifesto follows:

"Following the decision of the United States Congress in remitting the balance of the Boxer Indemnity, Great Britain, Japan and Russia are taking similar action. With the exception of Japan, whose position regarding the use of the remitted portion is not quite clear. Russia has designated the use of the money for an educational endowment, President Coolidge on behalf of the United States, declared that this sum shall be entirely utilised for cultural and educational purposes while the British Parliament has also introduced a resolution to use the money on enterprises which are of mutual benefit to China and Great Britain. The sense of the British Parliament in introducing this resolution is also to use the money for educational and cultural purposes and is so interpreted by the public in Great Britain as well as the oveaseas Chinese students.

"However, the realm of education and culture is a big one and an ambiguous one. The remitted portions from Great Britain and America beginning yearly from 1924 amount to less than three or four hundred thousand dollars per year. Only a limited sum is available for the purpose so it is impossible to take care of all the schemes that might be suggested. Instead of spreading the fund over a large number of undertakings, why not let us select the most important? This is the reason why a number of organisations have recently clamored for definition of its distribution. Unfortunately, views on the matter are far from unanimous. We, realising how this will effect the future progress in our cultural development and that the misappropriation of the funds would mean the loss of a golden opportunity which one meets in a thousand years and a failure to appreciate the spirit of the friendly powers, have gathered together the sum total of the concensus of opinion throughout the country and drafted a scheme whereby the returned portion of the British and American Boxer Indemnity might be distributed. The plan is for the consideration of the people of China. We trust that it will meet the approval of the educational and cultural bodies throughout the country, which will in turn hasten its consummation.

"1—The manner of use. Over a dozen plans have been suggested. For even distribution, it is best to divide the money proportionately among the provinces. For perpetual benefit, it is best to use it for the Conservation of the Huai River and the Construction of Railways. If the money is evenly distributed among the provinces without a definite purpose, no material benefit will be derived. The evenness of the distribution accomplishes nothing. The Conservation of the Huai and the Construction of railways will directly bring profits and indirectly promote education. However, during this period of restlessness, the people have long lost their power of supervision. They are unable to obtain the national and local finance for education, how can they entrust the funds to the government for river conservancy and railway construction or to expect the government to devote the returns of the conservation and railways to education. It is hopeless to expect this sort of thing to materialise.

"It is the humble opinion of this society that since the amount returned by Great Britain and United States is comparatively small, the various interests should, instead of struggling over minor issues, thus causing apparent dissension in the eyes of the foreigners, view the matter as a whole and agree on a set of general principles which are acceptable to the majority of the people. Then with the general principles as a working basis, the scope of activities might be prescribed with the result that whatever action taken by the people will assume a spirit of unification. This done, the government authorities, realising where the general concensus of opinion is focussed, will be guided in their policy.

"Considering what has already been said on the subject, the general principles should embody at least the following three points:

"I—Due respect should be given to the spirit in which the friendly power had remitted the indemnity.

"II—Since the amount is limited, efforts should be concentrated in using the money for the development of national public welfare.

III—The enterprises undertaken should be: a. What China needs most, b. Capable of making China's education independent and of establishing a permanent foundation for her civilisation, and c. Capable of increasing the welfare of humanity at large.

Taking the general principles as a whole, the most fitting undertaking is educational research. Among research work in education, scientific research is paramount, because it forms the foundation of all civilisations and industries. It is an urgent necessity which China lamentably lacks today and which she is unable to secure at present.

2—Undertakings. When the use of the remitted money is defined, then we may proceed to discuss the nature of the undertakings. Although there are many forms of educational undertakings, their nature is limited to two kinds: they are either for the elevation of certain courses of study or for the distribution of knowledge among the great mass. If both could be taken into consideration, a nation will be ahead both in her progress of science and in her mass education. We do not say that the existing educational institutions in China are not making any contributions towards these two ideals. But they are limited in their scope as well as their financial ability so that they are unable to develop these two aspects on a large scale.

"So below we set forth those which should be undertaken but have purposely left out all educational undertakings which the national and local authorities are dutibound to carry out without reference to funds returned by friendly powers:

"A.—Purely Research Work. 1. The establishment of a large research laboratory (for physical, chemical, biological and industrial research work) and to subsidise research laboratories with good records. 2. The subsidy of government and private universities to encourage research work.

"B.—Work to aid research and to distribute general knowledge. 1. The establishment of libraries. 2. The establishment of museums (Natural history, Philosophy, Mechanics and History).

"C—Transplantation of civilisation. 1. To establish Chinese chairs of literature and philosophy in foreign universities. 2. To exchange professors. 3. To give scholarships to British and American students to enable them to study in Chinese high institutes of learning.

"We have only enumerated above the most important items which have been suggested since the receipt of the news of the return of the indemnities. But to secure the best results, we are afraid that the entire sum returned by both countries will not be sufficient to take care of the work of research alone.

"3.—Administration and organisation. It is the unanimous opinion of all Chinese and foreigners that the returned money should be entrusted to a board of trustees consisting of a commission jointly appointed by China and the government which is returning the money. It is very important that the personnel of the board should be carefully selected. A clear definition should be given to the organisation of the board.

"The governments of China and of the country returning the indemnity should first take into consideration the concensus of opinion of the professional and educational bodies and set forth a number of general principles on the scope of the undertakings and the bases under which the funds are to be distributed. These should form the basis of the administration and allotment of the money by a commission to be appointed jointly by the two governments, who shall be free to carry out measures within the spirit and letters of the basis.

"The members of the commission shall have no political or diplomatic affiliations and shall be men of sterling character among the leaders of the educational and industrial world. The same number of Chinese and foreigners should sit on the commission. They are to be appointed with due respect to the opinion held of them by the professional and educational bodies. Their term of office shall be fixed, retiring when the terms expire.

"The above summarises our views on the administration of the funds and the formation of the commission which seems to have met with the general endorsement of thinking Chinese and foreigners. The reason why we suggest that agreement on general principles should be made first is because careful consideration must be given in the selection of the commission and the principles will enable the governments to select the most suitable men for the positions.

"However, after the agreement on the general principles success must depend upon the men serving on the commission, so pain must be taken in the selection of the personnel. The money must be considered as revenue collected out of the "blood and perspiration" of the populace and being used for the enlightenment of the mass, while appreciation should be given to the friendly powers, which have so generously returned what is due to them. Only men with the highest education and the richest experience are qualified to positions on the commission. This view is held by the various organisations in the country in their declarations and is but the natural conclusion drawn from the present political situation and social condition of China.

"At present, the government of Great Britain and the United States are expecting to have the just views of the Chinese presented to them so that they can decide upon the manner in which the indemnities could be utilised. It is alarming to notice how some militarists are vigorously conducting propaganda for the use of the indemnities for railway construction while the educationalists and professional men remain silent over the issue. It is high time that the latter should present a unanimous front in their advocacy and we humbly suggest the above for the consideration of the leaders of thinking populace in order that our just aspirations might be realised.

GOLD INFLUX INTO UNITED STATES HELPS DEPOSITS

National City Bank Explains Reasons For Recent Increase

The steady stream of gold coming into the United States from the rest of the world and not the current slackening of business has been the primary cause of the remarkable advance in bank deposits and bank resources in New York City, according to a conclusion reached by the National City Bank.

The institution, which now has deposits of nearly $850,000,000, sent out a supplement last month to its recent July Bank Letter under the heading "The Money Market: Influence of Gold Imports."

Deposits of Clearing House banks, according to the National City Bank, have increased by $526,558,000 from April 12 to the high figure of $4,824,142,000 on June 28. "It would be natural to attribute this increase mainly to the transfer of idle funds from the country, but the facts do not appear to support this view," according to the banks. "On March 26, 1924, which is about the date when commercial loans reached their highest point in 1924, loans classified as 'commercial loans' in those reporting member banks aggregated $7,997,853,000, and on June 18 the aggregate was $6,875,646,000, a decrease of $122,207,000. These comprise all other loans besides those made on stocks and bonds as collateral security.

"Between the same dates the total of all loans, discounts and investments in the same banks rose from $16,579,767,000 to $16,870,782,000, an increase of $291,025,000. Allowing for the decrease in commercial loans shown above, it is evident that loans on stocks and bonds, together with investments, increased in the sum of $413,232,000."

The analysis indicates that the increase of loans and investments in the country since March has been practically all in New York. "Outside of New York the decrease of commercial loans amounted to $26,423,000, while the increase in loans on stocks and bonds in investments was $30,532,000," the bank says. "This indicates that the reporting banks outside of New York have had no release of funds and apparently cannot have sent any large amount to New York. Such information as is available tends to confirm this view."

In seeking an explanation for the growth in loans and investments on stocks and bonds as contrasted with little change in the rest of the country, the bank's report says that "they seem to have been largely created here by the loans of the New York banks. This gold has been going to the banks, rather than to the Federal Reserve Bank and has resulted in making it possible for the banks to increase their own loans or investments from about seven to fourteen times the amount of these reserves, it is stated.

"In the past several years the effects of the inflow of gold have been offset in considerable degree by the action of the member banks in reducing the volume of rediscounts at the Reserve Banks, but at the present low ebb of rediscounts this influence is about exhausted," the report continues. 'It is true that the temper of the public is against inflation, but the appeal of cheap money is very alluring, and the inevitable policy of bankers who are operating under heavy fixed charges is to use their available earning power to the limit, even at low returns. This has been strikingly illustrated in the last three months, when commercial demands for credit were declining by the increased loans upon stocks and bonds and increased purchases of bonds for their own account, as shown by the foregoing figures."

'YELLOWS' MENACE PEACH ORCHARDS IN NEW JERSEY

No Preventive Of Disease Discovered In 1791 Has Been Found

In 1791 growers of peaches in New Jersey and the lower Delaware River valley, noticed that a strange disease was attacking their crops and because of its appearance called it the "Yellows," a name that still sticks to it. The disease spread and in 1798 became so alarming that a prize of $60 was offered to any one finding a way of preventing it. The reward was claimed by two contestants, who convinced the authorities that the disease was caused by insects.

Then came a number of other investigations which proved that the winners of the prize were mistaken, and so the work of finding a cure for the trouble was taken up again and is still going on. At the last meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, held at Atlantic City, a resolution was adopted approving of a co-operative investigation of "yellow" and "little peach" by the United States Government and the affected states. The President was asked to approve of an appropriation sufficient to carry on the work. William H. Martin, plant pathologist of New Jersey, says that the danger from the disease may become prevalent and ruin the peach industry of his state. He says:

"In Michigan, "yellows" appeared about 1866, but was not sufficiently prevalent to attract attention until about 1870, when the peach industry was destroyed within one decade. Similar outbreaks have been recorded in Delaware. In 1887, in a six-year-old orchard, only 130 trees out of 2,146 were found to be free from the disease.

"Figures obtained by Prof. M. A. Blake indicate that epidemics in the vicinity of Vineland have occurred periodically about once every ten or fifteen years. Prior to 1907 there was a severe outbreak of the disease. From 1913 until 1917 they stayed below five percent. In the three-year period from 1917 to 1920 the number of affected trees increased from an average of about six to twenty percent.

CAUSE PREMATURE RIPENING

"What are 'yellows' and 'little peach' and how do they affect the tree? One of the most characteristic symptoms of yellows is the fact that the fruit on diseased trees usually ripens several days to two weeks in advance of that of a normal tree and, in addition, the fruit from an affected tree is commonly more or less red spotted and blotched. The spots either occur on the skin or throughout the flesh.

"'Little peach' differs from 'yellows' in that the fruit remains small and ripens from several to ten days later than normal fruit of the same variety, and the diseased fruit is frequently flattened and somewhat rectangular in form."

Other symptoms described by Mr. Martin are sickly trees, a drooping of the leaves and yellow foliage. Mr. Martin says that while nothing is known concerning the cause of "yellows" and "little peach" there is information available which indicates that "yellows" is disseminated by budding with buds from diseased trees. Then he says:

"It is likewise known that the disease is not spread in the soil. It has been observed, however, that a diseased tree frequently becomes the center of infection and that surrounding healthy trees gradually become affected. It is clear that some factors other than those now known must contribute to the spread of this disease. It is entirely possible that the casual agent of "yellows" may be transmitted by insects—as is the case with aster yellows, potato and raspberry mosaic, and similar diseases.

"At the present time investigators at the Thompson Institute at Yonkers, N. Y., are conducting studies which should throw some light on the question of dissemination of the disease. Progressive fruit growers appreciate the seriousness of "yellows" and "little peach," and for this reason are urging that the investigation be started so that more information might be had on the question. The fruit committee of the horticultural society feels, however, that it cannot afford to await the outcome of these investigations, but believes that steps should be immediately taken that will lead to a reduction of these two dangerous diseases."

'STACK O'WHEATS' AMERICAN SYMBOL STATES WRITER

Mary Austin Talks Eloquently Of Struggle For U.S. Culture

Mrs. Mary Austin, novelist and an authority on Indian customs, recently told a cosmopolitan group of writers in New York that the Puritan origin of English, America, in stern conflict with the myth of Indian America, had greatly retarded the United States in forming a national culture. Mrs. Austin further explained that most of the Europeans she met thought Americans had no prospects of a national culture.

"Nothing could be less the truth about us," said Mrs. Austin, "and yet true in the sense that the myth of the American people is not yet articulated and so far as expressed not expressed in European terms. When last I was in England I was called upon at the close of a lecture to defend some verses of Carl Sandburg, in which my interlocutor insisted that there was but one line of poetry. I cannot now quote the exact lines, but they referred to the poet's memories of a place the items of which included musical instruments made there 'boxes to catch the wind' and also 'a stack o' wheats.'

"Now 'boxes to catch the wind' is so old a figure of speech that even an Englishman could recognise it at first hand as poetic. My interlocutor agreed to that, but 'stack o' wheats' offended his poetic sense. Now as a matter of fact a 'stack o' wheats' is one of those purely American symbols which the world must learn to know. Its very origin is symbolic, for it is a hybrid between the American Indian corn cake, a tortilla of the West, baked on a flat rock, and the English muffin poured out in rings placed on a hot griddle.

"It is the most easily prepared bread in the world, which the pioneer housewife could stir up and bake while her man was feeding the stock or rolling the tent for another day's journey toward the going down of the sun. All that the modern housemother added to the native cracked corn or wheat cake was a little leavening and butter instead of grease. With the maple syrup which the Indian gave us it makes a perfect meal, cereal and fat and sweet. On that breakfast the whole pioneer movement of America marched by a thousand camp fires toward the conquest of the West. And this is the first native food the immigrant learns to eat as he comes from Ellis Island, coming from a land where he has always eaten bread different from the superior classes of his native land, black bread and coarse, now to sit down and eat before going to work in the morning the same food that his employer eats in his palatial dining room, a 'stack o' wheats.'

SAME AS THE KING HAS

"In England, when I am in the country and have walked far down unfrequented lanes to ask at some hedger's cottage for tea, they give me a beautiful slice of white bread, and I am always thrilled by it, understanding the democracy of England to be expressed by the fact that in that hedger's cottage I am eating the same white wheaten loaf that the King eats in his palace. So I say to our foreign friends, if you would understand the symbolism of America turn aside tomorrow for your breakfast to some of those white-tiled interiors where you see the workingman preparing for his day's work and eat with him the symbolic bread of the Republic, the very term for which is symbolic of abundance, 'stack,' a heap, a sufficient quantity. For I assure you that if you look with any hope of discovering the true foundation of the Republic under one of them you will find a stack o' wheats.

"I could show you if there were time a score of such sympols of our assimilation to the land in which we live, of the culture-making kind which are of the substance of true poetry. The chances are, indeed, if you find anything in America which you you do not understand, particularly if it strikes vague reactions of strangeness out of you, inquiry will prove it to be a phase of the struggle, clumsy and ineffectual though it be, to make the myth appear, the myth of the American people and the American god.

"What we call culture, meaning the high practice of wisdom and the arts, has, heretofore, been addressed to an aristocracy, that is, to a special class to whom alone adhered the privilege of higher education. It has not been expected in the past in Europe that the common people should enter into the highest phases of any country's culture. It has been thought even that particular artists and thinkers have their superiority proved by the degree to which the common people fail to understand them when they appear. But the United States launched upon the experiment of producing a culture which should be equally accessible to all citizens of the Republic.

NOT AN EASY TASK

"We by no means despair of yet doing so, though we sadly realise that the task is neither so easy nor of the nature we just supposed it to be. The least understood aspects of our literature and art are those in which this idea of being intelligible to all the people appear. I cannot go into that on this occasion, I merely recommend it to you for consideration as the true explanation of much that we do not understand clearly ourselves. At its worst it is evidence of the profound engagement of the American soul with the effort to make the American god show himself in those forms we call cultural.

"But the American god is not as the gods of Europe, no Zeus thundering from Olympus; no Jehovah sitting 'in the vault above the Cherubim,' not even the later Christian God of Judgment, dividing Heaven from hell, but Demos, the great God Demos, the God-Within-the-People.

"This is the fundamental idea behind a democratic culture, and the only excuse for democracy, that there is a god able and wishful to express himself in the common will of the many. If you analyse any feature of our American culture you will find this idea struggling blindly at the back of the phenomenon, back of the structural power of bridges, the speed of trains, the power of the dynamo, becoming visible in in-

China Cotton

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company state in their cotton report:

Spinners during the past week have shown no interest whatever in spot cotton but have contracted a fairly large quantity for delivery during the months of October and November at rates resembling those quoted in the local Cotton Exchanges for similar deliveries. Taking into consideration the average of the prices current in the Cotton Goods Exchange during the week under review and comparing same with the figures of the previous period, an advance of about Tls. 0.50 per picul at the close is observable.

While the general favorable weather conditions for the domestic growing crop would encourage expectations of checking any further advances in the value of the staple, yet the opposite is taking place and may be ascribable to the continued preponderating absorption of the China growth for Japanese interests. However, no sooner satisfaction to a certain extent is attained in this direction with no digression in the weather occurring in the meantime to affect detrimentally the domestic harvesting season and also having in view an expected indication of a larger yield in the U.S.A. to be published shortly by the American Government Bureau, there is every reason to look forward to a more favorable modification of the prevailing rates on the raw material.

Tone of the market: Firm.

ROSENFELD'S REPORT

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son, Inc., states in their report:

Recent developments have been such as to serve to check the declining tendency of the market, and promise to occasion a steadier and perhaps a higher market in the future. Climatic conditions in the cotton belt are the most important market influence for the time being, therefore, it would be hazardous to attempt any predictions as to the course of prices in the near future; the chances for success seem to lie in judicious operations based on daily developments.

Regarding the crop outlook, the attention of the trade is directed entirely to the situation in our province, where here has been partial from the dry hot weather. The condition of the crop is exceptionally good. Rain, however, is becoming a necessity and unless the precipitation be more than mere showers complaints will be freely heard.

In the circumstances, we believe that as long as the outlook for the next crop remains favorable, the preponderance of chances will be against the market. In the meanwhile, however, the market will be governed by weather conditions in the cotton belt and by the action of professional operators and also the world markets.

What The Chinese Papers Are Saying

Peking, August 7.—The Hongkong and Shanghai Bank has released the sum of £150,000 on account of the proceeds of the sale of the German bonds, the Russo-Asiatic Bank has released £80,000 which will be used for the administrative and military expenses for July. The report that the Yokohama Specie Bank has also consented to release its share is yet unconfirmed. The government is satisfied with the manner of the remittance as the slow process will give it an excuse to put off the militarists.—Shun Pao.

Peking, August 7.—All the government bonds took a big fall in their price today as a result of the flood. Heavy rain took place at Southern Peking yesterday while Western Peking suffered another downpour today.—Shun Pao.

Mukden, August 7.—A Military Conference was held here today to decide upon the responsibilities of the defence of the Three Eastern Provinces. General Chang Hsueh-liang was assigned the territory of the South-west frontier; Li Ching-lin, the North-west; Tang Yu-ling, the South-east and Chu Chow-hsu, the North-east.—Shun Pao.

Mukden, August 7.—General Chang Hsueh-liang will make an inspection trip of the Manchurian Provinces in the middle of September. He will be accompanied by a regiment each of cavalry, artillery and infantry and one company of machine gunners.—Shun Pao.

Peking, August 7.—Tseng Jen-kang, a Hunan Parliamentarian, was killed yesterday by a fall as the Peking-Mukden Railway was speeding between Huangchang and Antung. His brains were dashed out. Mr. Tseng left Peking with a number of friends for Tientsin by the 4 o'clock train. On account of the heat, he went to the platform for the air and consequently disappeared. His mutilated body was discovered by the railway police near Anting and was shipped back to Peking today.—Shanghai Tribune.

Peking, August 7.—The Russian experts are expected to arrive in Peking on the 13th. It has been agreed to open the negotiations officially on the 18th.—Shanghai Tribune.

Tientsin, August 7.—Colonel Huang En-yung, an aide to Marshal Wu Pei-fu, arrived here today. He will proceed to Tsangchow to recruit more troops for Yu's army.—Shanghai Tribune.

Peking, August 7.—Today at noon, Tsao Kun gave a tiffin in honor of the Soviet representative, M. L. Karakhan at the Huai Jen Palace. Thirty-one guests were present including cabinet ministers and Karakhan's staff. Wang Keh-ming, Chang Kuo-kan and Feng Yu-hsiang did not attend. Only the health of the two nations was toasted, no speeches being given. A picture was taken after the tiffin.—Eastern Times.

Changsha, August 7.—Eighty-seven Assembly men have endorsed the bill for the revision of the Provincial Constitution. Four division commanders here are drafting a circular telegram, advocating its revision.—Eastern Times.

Changsha, August 7.—An epidemic of plague has broken out of Hengyang. It is spreading rapidly.—Eastern Times.

Peking, August 7.—The Peking Chinese Chamber of Commerce will meet on Sunday to discuss the question of local peace and order vis a vis the recent murder by a Police Constable by the bodyguards of Tsao Kun.—Eastern Times.

Canton, August 7.—The Japanese Consul-General at Canton called on Dr. Sun Yat-sen today. In the course of his conversation, the visitor asserted that Tokio was about to revise the exclusion act recently promulgated against Chinese laborers, advocated the early settlement of the Shameen strike through peaceful means and hoped for the organisation of a commission of Chinese savants for the disposal of the remitted Boxer Indemnity for educational and cultural purposes.—Republican Daily News.

Peking, August 7.—According to a report from Chu Shao-hsin, Chinese Charge D'Affaires at London, the British Government, while willing to rendite the Mixed Court at Shanghai, does not wish to give up the criminal jurisdiction enjoyed by its consuls.—Republican Daily News.

Peking, August 7.—General Pao Kwei-ching has declined to be director of the Chinese Eastern Railway.—Republican Daily News.

Illinois May Have Blind Justice.

PAUL FARTHING. INTL

Justice may be blind, but blind Justices are rarely seen except in statues and paintings. However, Illinois may soon have a blind Justice of the Supreme Court in Paul Farthing, of East St. Louis, Ill., President of the Bar Association of that city and a prominent attorney, whose candidacy is said to assure his election. Although blind since birth, he graduated from law school with highest honors and has won fame as an attorney.

An American Foreign Trade Program

THE most important organisation in the United States devoted to the development of foreign commerce is the National Foreign Trade Council, which numbers representatives of leading manufacturing concerns in all parts of the United States and which maintains its national headquarters at India House, New York. This organisation holds a conference every year at which time special matters affecting the development of American trade with other countries are considered. The conference this year was held in Boston on June 4, 5, and 6 and was presided over by Mr. James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation. On the last day of the convention a general report was adopted, of which the following is a summary:

1.—That there should be developed among the American people a solidarity of will and a unity of purpose to promote the maintenance and expansion of foreign trade.

2.—That development and maintenance of the merchant marine, privately owned and operated, is essential, the present shipping policy of the United States making it impossible for private capital to purchase steamers and compete with Government-owned tonnage in foreign trade.

3.—That American investment bankers when negotiating foreign loans should so handle them as to further American trade and promote occupation for our people.

4.—That the system of federal taxation imposed upon this country forcibly supports the suggestion that it was intended by its framers to defeat, instead of encourage, our foreign trade.

5.—That the United States is the only trading nation in the world which maintains the indefensible policy of taxing its nationals resident abroad upon incomes derived from the conduct of business in the country of residence.

6.—That we need an effective system of foreign trade zones, enabling efficient handling of cleaning, grading and mixing of foreign merchandise for re-export without the present prohibition conditions of difficulty, delay and expense.

7.—That thorough reorganisation of the foreign service of the Government should be effected to attract young men from all parts of the Nation to a permanent career.

8.—That the laws affecting immigration should be sufficiently liberal to provide a volume commensurate with the necessities of agriculture and other industries in the development of foreign markets for their exportable surplus.

9.—That the regulation of the admission of aliens to our shores is a domestic question, but it should be handled without needless impairment of our friendly relations with other countries.

Of first interest in connection with a consideration of the above program is the fact that several of the major items touched upon are not new to American residents of China and have already received much considerations by American organisations in this part of the world. This applies especially to matters of taxation, the reorganisation of the U. S. Foreign Services, the development of the merchant marine and the control of American foreign loans to the effect that the proceeds may go to the development of American industries.

Mr. Farrell, in this opening address at the Convention, spoke of the significant changes which have taken place in the foreign commerce of the United States in recent years. "Twenty years ago," said Mr. Farrell, "nearly 90 per cent. of our exports from the United States were produced by less than 20 concerns, while during 1923 the 100 chief exports represented only 85 per cent. of the total exports, and also were the products of wide diversification of manufacture.

"It should be plain that wider cultivation of foreign markets would tend to stimulate American enterprise. There is an inviting opportunity for expended effort, particularly in markets which have not heretofore attracted as much attention from American manufacturers and exporters as might have been given to them profitably. Great Britain, not including Ireland, took from us in 1923 merchandise to the value of G. $865,000,000. The total of our exports to the 19 countries of South America was G. $659,000,000. Great Britain has a population of less than 50,000,000 and more than 1,000,000 are unemployed. The population of Latin America is more than twice that. Moreover we bought from Latin America considerably more than we sold to her. Thus Latin America had dollars with which to purchase the things she needed or wanted. These things force upon us the suggestion that in the markets of South and Central America there is opportunity for greater expansion. . . . . ."

Franklin Remington, chairman of the board of the Foundation Company of New York, in discussing the subject of American foreign loans, urged the formation of "debenture corporations" composed of leading manufacturers cooperating with bankers. These two would, he said, act as a controlling body over such foreign loans, the theory being that trade should follow loans and must be made to do so. According to Mr. Remington, the United States has loaned G. $4,000,000,000 abroad since 1919. He called attention to the fact that Great Britain had always followed a policy of coordinating loans and business. "When England lends money," he said, "she stipulates that the borrower must buy her goods, and this has largely been responsible for Britain's long period of commercial prosperity."

A Definite Step Forward

WE return today to the subject of the Anglo-Russian treaties because, to our mind, the transaction in London is of such outstanding significance that it may conceivably mark a turning point in the affairs of Russia, and, consequently, in the affairs of the world in general. M. Rakovsky, the principal Russian delegate in London, says that the treaty is an immense step forward. It is the first time that the Soviet Government has given its pledge to satisfy the interests of the different categories of British claimants who had lost by the Revolution of 1917. In his opinion, the political side of the treaty is even more important than the economic because it renews Anglo-Russian friendship on a solid foundation. And here it may be added that once Anglo-Russian friendship is renewed on an enduring foundation, the influence of Great Britain in bringing about an ultimate understanding between Russia and other countries should not be negligible.

It may be frankly stated that the news of the successful termination to the Anglo-Russian negotiations is all the more heartening in that success was totally unexpected in many responsible quarters which entertained the firm conviction that the negotiations would be ultimately wrecked by reason of the attitude previously adopted by Soviet delegates at various conferences which they had attended. One of the factors contributing to this pessimistic outlook relative to the Angle-Russian negotiations is that a haughtier tone toward concession-seekers from abroad which has for some time been the order of the day in Russia. It was the note struck by Premier Rykoff recently in his summary of economic revival presented to the International Communist Congress. Russia, according to Rykoff, is so well off comparatively that she need no longer stand hat in hand before foreign capital. The betterment in conditions is by comparison only with the low ebb of 1920, on the morrow of the civil war and before the introduction of the New Economic Policy. Russian industry in that year had fallen to less than 15 per cent. of the pre-war level and in some branches had virtually disappeared. Today, according to Rykoff, industry registers 45 per cent. of pre-war production. Wages are between 65 and 70 per cent. of the pre-war average. The sown area is up to nearly 90 per cent. An industrial machine, however functioning with less than 50 per cent. of pre-war efficiency, especially in a country where industry in 1914 was still in its infancy, argues that Russia is still far from prosperity. If wages, presumably in money, are only 70 per cent. of what they were in 1914, real wages are much lower than 70 per cent. in view of the enormous rise in prices. The agricultural showing is by far the best, but agriculture is obviously the first to recover from demoralisation. War does little harm to the fields and meadows. Even a 10 per cent. deficiency in agricultural production is a serious problem for a people living on the very edge of mere subsistence, as the Russian peasant lived before the War.

Nevertheless, there would be reason to expect a further improvement in Russia's economic life but for one factor, and that is the present sharp swerve back to Communist economics. Significant in Rykoff's remarks are the statements that the improvement in the "light" industries has been much more rapid than in the "heavy" industries, and that agriculture has shown a steady improvement during the three years since the introduction of the New Economic Policy. The heavy industries are the nationalised industries, mining, metallurgy and textiles. The light industries are those that were left or have been returned to private management. What will happen now that private enterprise is once more being suppressed? The theory behind Lenin's New Economic Policy was that the Communists, not yet having learned the trick of creating wealth, must call back the "capitalists" for the emergency. The unexpressed idea was that the wealth created by the "Nepmen" could be taxed away by the Government. This process was under way even during Lenin's last days. It has been since discared as too moderate and in favor of doing away with the "Nepmen" altogether.

That is the most interesting question of the future in Russia. Has Communism at last learned "how to trade," or, after a new dose of stiff Marxism, will the humble but necessary capitalist be called in to help? There can be no two answers to that question. Russia has reached the crucial point where she realises, even though sadly and reluctantly, that a nation without capitalists is like a boat without a rudder. It is this growing realisation that must have hastened an agreement with the British Government. Even though M. Rakovsky may declare that it is a profound mistake to consider the proposed loan from Great Britain as a concession entirely favoring Russia, the majority of people will be inclined to think that it is a piece of rare good fortune for the Soviet Government to secure a loan from any foreign Government after all that has happened in Russia since that fateful November of 1917. As M. Rakovsky himself avers, without a loan, any extension of Anglo-Russian trade would be impossible. It is only in the future that the Russians will be able fully to appraise the extent of the debt they owe to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the British Premier, who has had no easy task in carrying through his plans in the face of Liberal and Conservative hostility, and one cannot help expressing admiration at the way in which, in addition to achieving a diplomatic triumph in securing pledges from the Soviet never before given, he has adroitly confounded the critics of the British Labor Government in the House of Commons, as narrated in the telegrams published elsewhere in today's issue. There is this much to be said for the first Labor Premier of England—that he has succeeded in getting something done, something accomplished, where his predecessors only met with failure. If Mr. MacDonald is able, in the near future, to reconcile the conflicting aspirations of Germany and France, he will have rendered a service not alone to his own country but to the whole world. It is to be hoped that success will crown his efforts to bring about a resettlement of the European problem. Without a reshaping of the policies of European Governments, the progress of the world must remain arrested.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

By Mathy

THE HUMANITIES VERSUS THE IDEALS

The humanities are the ordinary universal feelings, such as family affection, aversion to cruelty, love of justice and of liberty.

The ideals are the so-called big enthusiasms, as religion, patriotism, reform, and the like.

The humanities are sometimes called the red passions; the ideals the white passions.

The great institutions of the race have been formed and kept alive by the white passions. These include churches, political parties, nations, and various societies and associations, secret and public.

The progress of mankind has been made through institutions, embodying ideals, which we may call the centrifugal force. The humanities have always pulled against this, and may be termed the centripetal force.

Thus, although great ideals present themselves to men as beneficial, yet in the carrying out of them men often become cruel, unjust, and tyrannical. So the greatest crimes of earth are committed under the influence of movements designed to do the greatest good.

Under the church we have seen persecution, a ruthless disregard of human feeling, families torn asunder, opinion coerced, bodies tortured.

The humanities in time destroyed the baleful power of the religious ideal, its dreams of dominance and its inhuman fanaticism. Plain pity and sympathy battered down the monstrous structure of iron idealism. The horrors of the medieval inquisition and the dark intolerance of puritanism had to yield to the humanities.

Most of the great tragedies have been the crushing out of human and natural feeling by some ideal which once helpful, has become monstrous. Such were the Greek tragedies, where men were the victims of the gods.

War is the colossal force of an ideal, patriotism, where the check of the humanities has been entirely cut off.

It is supposed to ennoble men and states. It has always been the preferred occupation of the noble class, kings and courtiers, because the contempt of personal feelings and the merciless sacrifice of the humanities have seemed grand and royal.

But by and by war must yield to the eternal humanities. Sheer human sympathies will abolish it.

The humanities are peculiarly of the common people. Therefore, they find expression and come into political effect quickly in democracies. In the United States, for instance, the rule of a religious party or the program of patriotic militarism is impossible. We have too much red passion to permit the ascendancy of white passions.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," a book of red passion, sympathy for the negro, overthrew the "white" ideals of the slave oligarchy.

The cry of a starving mother, the protest of wronged workmen, can defeat the apparently resistless power of massed capital.

One drop of blood outweighs the most splendid scheme of the theorist.

The history of the world is the unceasing struggle of the humanities against great ideals which, crystallised into institutions, have become inhuman.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

BY Wm. F. KIRK

Our teecher was telling us yesterday about a grate big animile wich used to live on this here erth milyuns of yeers ago, she sed the naim of this animile was the Dinner-Sour.

So I asked Pa did he beleeve there was evver Dinner-Sours on this erth & Pa sed Sure, Bobbie, heeps & heeps of them. You can see thare skelletins eeven now in the big Mew-seeums, sed Pa.

Why aint thare no Dinner-Sours no moar? I sed.

Beekaus thay was too big & clumsy to live thru the ages, Bobbie, sed Pa. Men got so thay knowd enuff to kill them terribul monsters faster than the monsters cud be born aggenn, sed Pa, & in time thay passed away, eeven as the Boot Legger will pass away wen gents gits oaver beeing thirsty for Ruff on Rats, Bobbie, sed Pa.

Why did thay call them Dinner-Sours? I sed.

Because thay lived on sour appels, Bobbie, sed Pa. Thay wud pick about a thousan sour appels for thare dinner, wich made thare Dinner Sour, sed Pa. Ha Ha, sed Pa. Wife, sed Pa, did you git that fast one, or did it go oaver yure head? sed Pa.

I got it, sed Ma, such as it was I got it. You doant want to maik my dinner sour, do you, deerest? sed Ma to Pa.

No, sed Pa, I thot you wud git a good laff out of that wheeze, sed Pa, but I have offen notised, sed Pa, that wimmen is not vary quick to git a flash of hew-mor, sed Pa.

Why, you poor old deer, sed Ma, you doant call that hew-mor, do you? sed Ma. Go on & tell Bobbie about Dinner-Sours. Ma sed, & leeve out the Joe Miller stuff, sed Ma.

Per-haps I am boring Bobbie as well as you, sed Pa, per-haps I better close my trap & reed my paiper, sed Pa.

No, Pa, I sed, go on & tell me sum moar about them old monsters wich lived here milyuns of yeers ago.

Well, sed Pa, thare was a cute littel pet called the Pleesy-o-saurus, sed Pa, it was longer than the Dinner-Sour but not quite so broad across the sholders, sed Pa. It wayed only about fifteen or twenty tons, sed Pa, so it cud git around kind of handy. Its favorit dish was cave men a la Moad, sed Pa. It wud eet a dozen cave men as eesy as you wud eet a dozen oysters, Bobbie, and then, the dust! For all life under-talkers in them braive days, Bobbie, sed Pa. Peepul died awful sudden & was berried the minnit thay died, sed Pa.

What terribul times thay were, to be sure, sed Ma.

Yes, sed Pa, eeven the Dinner-Sours was afraide of wimmen.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

Oh, no the world is not all wrong,
There's much good in it yet;
The sun, the scientists have found,
Will last ten billion years;
It takes a puree that is thick and long
To keep us out of debt.
But knights have ceased to ride around
And string men on their spears.

The girls continue to be quick
In learning how to kiss,
The charm has not departed from
The dainty things they wear;
It may be hard sometimes to pick
The way that leads to bliss,
But many a peach and many a plum
Will still be ripe and rare.

Not all the bankers have been sued
By girls with broken hearts,
The locomotives often miss
The motorist a mile;
The bandits frequently are rude
In practising their arts,
But please don't be forgetting this:
Good faith is still worth while.

Boys who insist on rocking boats
Are frequently upset,
The hypocrites and demagogues
Still lead the crowds astray;
But high the starry banner floats
Its stripes are lovely yet,
And always, out beyond the fogs,
The sun still shines away.

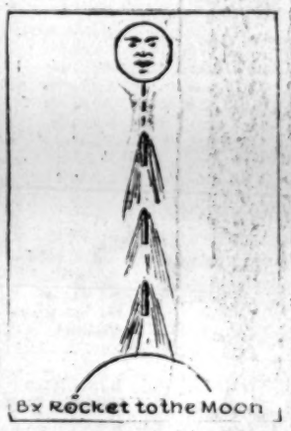
By Rocket To The Moon

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Prof R. H. Goddard, of Clark University, has taken one more step toward the realisation of his "moon-rocket." He has, I understand, a test rocket under construction, which will be ready for firing before the end of the Summer. It is small, compared with the dimensions of a rocket that could be considered capable of reaching the moon, and is intended to fly only ten miles upward; but Prof. Goddard has been quoted as saying that upon the success of this experimental projectile may depend the effort to reach the lunar satellite.

This rocket is to be five feet long and six inches in diameter, or ten times as long as thick. It will carry a series of explosive charges, arranged in such a manner that they will be exploded at fixed intervals, thus successively accelerating the speed of the rocket.



Except that there must be a partial loss of speed in the intervals between the explosions, this process would create an uninterrupted acceleration, like that of gravity, which adds continuously to the speed of a falling body.

Obviously the greatest practical difficulty in constructing a rocket capable of going as far as the moon must lie in the supply of a sufficient number of explosive charges and the arrangement for their discharge at regular intervals, without interference. How large the rocket would have to be is a question that experiment alone can determine.

The objection has been raised that the rocket could not continue to propel itself after it passed out of the atmosphere, the notion of the objectors being that then there would be "nothing to push against." But to reason thus is to ignore the fact that the source of the rocket's motion is impulsion produced by the reaction of the explosive force upon the rocket, and this reaction does not depend upon the existence of "something to push against." The principle is seen in operation in the "kicking" of a gun.

There are many delicate points to be decided in advance of any attempt to actually fire a rocket at the moon. To hit the moon would be an incomparably more difficult feat than to hit a distant warship with a torpedo. Both earth and moon are travelling in the same direction around the sun, but the moon's motion is irregular in that part of the time it gains upon the earth, and part of the time it loses. The earth at the same time is rotating on its axis, and the rocket would necessarily share this rotatory motion, which would enter into composition with the projective motion, and thus have to be carefully allowed for.

There is a point between the earth and the moon where their respective attractions may be said to balance, or to counteract each other. This would be something like 24,000 miles from the moon: from which point the rocket would begin to fall toward the moon under the effects of lunar gravity.

How to know whether the rocket had attained its aim is another problem to be solved. It might be done by providing for the production of a flare of light, or of a dense black cloud on the moon at the point where the rocket struck.

The flight is unquestionably physically possible, and the rocket idea is theoretically sound and who would not be thrilled by the news that it had succeeded? It would be a bloodless victory for all mankind.

WHY MARRIAGES FAIL

"We train our young people for everything else, but we don't train them for marriage. If I were asked to name the fundamental causes of divorce I would begin with three factors. The first two would be the respective homes in which the two young people in any particular instance were brought up, and the third would be the social order. The trouble begins before marriage. Temperamental differences are unimportant except when there is an utterly unsportsmanlike intolerance of each with the other."
—Rabbi Stephen A. Wise.

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

A Ribbon May Be Looped at the Shoulder With an End Caught Around the Ankle With a Rose

The Hindoo writing of the charms of pastoral life in his native land never fails to speak of the tinkle-tinkle of anklet against anklet worn by the young women as they go to stream or well to draw water for their household tasks. The most virtuous of women in India wear these anklets. They think no more of them than of their bracelets. And yet to us Occidentals there always seems to be something just a little shocking about the anklet. Yet even the most conventional of our women dress sometimes in a manner that would shock an untraveled Oriental. It is all no doubt a matter of custom.

The other day a celebrated actress and dancer appeared in court wearing a glittering diamond anklet beneath her sheer flesh-colored stocking. No one saw it at first—but when they did, they had eyes for nothing else. Even the judge craned his neck.

So we can wear bracelets of anything, from lion's teeth from Central Africa to olive pits from the Mount of Olives, and no one is much concerned. We can have bracelets placed so closely upon our arms that there would not be room for a postage stamp between; but even a single band of diamonds set in platinum worn on the ankle causes concern.

Thus it was a little while ago at a display of new French frocks. A detail that created most interest on the part of the spectators was a long blue ribbon caught at the shoulders that fell below the hem and was caught around the ankle with a rose. The sketch shows the effect. The frock is of white net embroidered in silver.

White net frock, embroidered in silver, with blue ribbon falling from shoulder and caught around the ankle with pink rose.

FASHION FLASHES

Cut steel jewelry has lately come to the fore and women with really beautiful pearl earrings and necklaces are putting these aside in favor of the cheaper cut-steel ornaments which happen to be the fad of the hour. Shiny nickel beads are also much admired.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

FURS IN SUMMER

Oddly enough, it was when spring days began to grow warm that fashionable women, some of them, left off wearing silk scarfs with their suits and tailored coat frocks and began to wear fur neckpieces. Undoubtedly the small fur neckpiece has come into its own again, but it is perhaps too bad that it did so just when furs logically, and according to old-fashioned notions, should be laid away in cedar chests or deposited in cold storage.

But with a little care and attention furs can be kept in good condition even in warm weather. You should have a small, soft brush with which to keep them free from dust, but you should never use a strong brush or use any brush when the fur is damp. When damp or wet shake out as much moisture as possible and then hang in a warm airy place, but never near the fire. When perfectly dry brush them with the soft brush. If by chance you have a warm-weather coat trimmed with fur—possibly a fur collar—be sure that you give it an occasional airing even when not in use. Let it hang in the air frequently.

Some clever women clean their own furs, using powdered magnesia for white and very light furs and bran for other furs. If you do not clean your furs yourself you should make a rule never to wear a light fur after it has become soiled or you will have difficulty in having it restored to its natural purity. Take them to the professional cleaner—but be sure he knows just how to clean furs.

Spanish Cream

Beat the yolks of four eggs and four tablespoons of sugar together until very creamy. Cover half a box of gelatine with a little milk to dissolve it. Heat one quart of milk to the boiling point, and add the dissolved gelatine, the eggs and sugar, and let it thicken, but do not let it boil. Remove from the fire, beat occasionally until perfectly cold. Then stir in the whites of the four eggs, which have been beaten to a stiff froth, flavor with vanilla and set on the ice to cool.

Flood Reports

The following reports as to flood conditions have been received by the China International Famine Relief Commission for the period August 4th-5th; Yung Nien Hsien. From July 15th it has rained continually, while the Ming Ho, Cheng Ho and Fu Ho are rising rapidly. There are many breaks in the dykes in these river districts, the Ming Ho having one of 700 fee, while the Fu Ho has three breaks on the west bank in the vicinity of the city and two more on the north bank. The lower area here is completely submerged.

Kao Cheng. From July 11th to the 16th it has rained continually, and many farms and houses have been submerged. The Hu To Ho is rising very rapidly and has already inundated some thirty villages.

Sin Ho. From the beginning of July it rained for over ten days steadily, and as that district is one of the lowest in the province it has suffered severely. The Fu Yang Ho has made two breaches in the dyke and swamped all the neighboring villages. Reports state that there is 100 feet of water in some parts of this area.

Tung Hsien. The Liang Hsin Ho has risen suddenly and spread to the south, while the Sha Ho has broken its dykes and inundated the country towards the coast. Many people are reported to have been drowned and most of the houses have collapsed.

Kou Pei Kow. Steady rain was experienced at the beginning of July, and on the 9th there was a sudden flood, but fortunately the dyke held and up to date there have been no serious results to report.

An Ping Hsien reports that on July 14th the Chu Lung Ho was rising rapidly and that it had a break in the dyke of some 300 feet, thus inundating many villages. In the south the Shen Che Ho had risen suddenly and flooded many villages and destroyed the houses.

Tsing Yuan. (Paoting) Continuous rain here since the beginning of July culminated in a big flood on the 11th, when many houses and farms were inundated, water being reported to be 100 feet in depth in some places.

Ta Ching Hsien. Continuous rain since the commencement of July caused the Tsu Ya Ho to overflow its banks and submerge the surrounding districts. In the northern part of the district the Ching Ho and the Chung Ting Ho also overflowed and destroyed some portion of their dykes, so that many houses were destroyed.

Ning Tsin Hsien. Steady rain was experienced here from the first of the month and the villages to the south coast were mostly submerged, so that there is no hope for the harvest this autumn.

Kwang Tsung Hsien. Frequent rains at the beginning of July flooded the low lying ground, but the weather cleared slightly and the water has abated somewhat.

Wei Hsien. From July 6th to July 17th much rain has fallen but serious floods are not apprehended unless conditions alter for the worse.

S. S. Fukien Wrecked As Pirates Block Course Off Binghai

Vessel Brought To Hidden Rocks; 16 Passengers Were Robbed

(China Press Correspondence)

Hinghwa, Fukien, July 31.—A returned student from Japan, who was on the s.s. Fukien, wrecked off the Binghai Peninsula last week, brings fuller report of the disaster. The steamer was steaming along under a moonlight sky with light wind blowing when two Chinese junks appeared across the course. Thinking that probably the people on the junks were unaware of the danger of collision, the pilot decided to vary the course to avoid them. This brought the vessel against hidden rocks and wrecked it.

Only one of the life boats proved serviceable. This was soon filled to its capacity the returned student finding a place only by leaping from the deck of the sinking steamer into the boat. The life boat rowed over to where the junks were hanging idle by and boarded them. They turned out to be pirate boats. The pirates relieved these passengers some sixteen in number, of all the valuables they possessed and then set them ashore. After this the pirates returned to the steamer which was left with its prow out of the water.

It seems clear that the pirate boats knew of the rocks and purposely forced the steamer out of her course. It is reported that most of the four hundred odd passengers and crew thinking that the boat was going down in deep water jumped into the sea and were lost. The pirate boats made no effort to rescue any of them.

Appropriation of Jardine Motor-Boat Comes Into Court

Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Co. were the complainants in a case in the Mixed Court yesterday concerning the temporary appropriation of their motor-boat "Ewo" by several men, foreign and Chinese, on July 31. Two defendants, Chinese boatmen, appeared in Court yesterday before Mr. Whitamore, British Assessor, and Magistrate Yui. Mr. G. H. Wright appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. Moss for the defendants.

The charge is that at 4 a.m. on July 31 two foreigners and several Chinese took the boat from her moorings at Ewo jetty and went up Soochow Creek, where, it was stated, they had searched a boatload of melons. The Court yesterday was occupied in trying to find a charge under which to prosecute, Mr. Moss, for the defence, asked for a dismissal in view of the lack of a definite charge, but this was refused, and after discussion it was decided that the case be adjourned until next Monday, the two arrested men being held in $100 cash or shop security each. Assessor Whitamore expressed the belief, shared by Magistrate Yui, that there was an article in the Code under which the offense could be prosecuted.

NEW TEACHERS WILL COME TO AMERICAN SCHOOL

Seven Instructors Engaged To Replace Those Who Are Leaving

Word has just been received from the board of trustees in New York of the engagement of seven new teachers for the Shanghai American School replacing those whose contracts expired at the end of the past school year. Six of these teachers are due in Shanghai by the s.s. President Lincoln from San Francisco on August 26th and one by the President Madison from Seattle on August 29th.

Miss Gertrude I. Barndt a graduate of the University of Washington, comes after two years' teaching experience at Punahou Institute, Honolulu, and two years in the High School at Yakima, Washington.

Miss Mabel Colbert, who comes to the music department of the school, has been head of the piano department of Columbia College, Milton, Oregon, with nine years of experience in teaching, including four years as head of the piano department of the public schools of Oakwood, Texas, and two years at the Wolcott Conservatory of Music in Denver, Colorado, and holds state teacher's certificates in Texas and Oregon.

Miss Margaret McElveen is a graduate of the University of Denver with a Master's degree and a successful teaching record covering the past four years in high schools and junior colleges in the Pacific Northwest.

In addition Miss Helen M. Graver and Miss Jane B. Smith come for work in the grades and Messrs. J. D. Brooks and F. M. Jones for high school.

Mr. George A. Loehr, for the past two years a teacher in the Chinese Y. M. C. A., will have charge of the work in modern languages. Mr. Loehr secured his secondary education in France and in Honolulu and taught for two years in Havana.

Miss Zelma L. Holman, a graduate of the University of Washington, with training at Beutell Business College, and five years' teaching experience in the Pacific Northwest and China, has already entered upon her duties as secretary of the school.

With the securing of one additional teacher, the staff for the coming year will be complete. Preliminary enrollments indicate a still further increase of attendance to the ultimate capacity of the present plant. The annual prospectus just issued indicates an enrollment last year of 412, of whom 159 were in the high school. Registrations to date exceed those received up to September 12th last year.

The campus improvements with the regrading and sodding which have been in progress since the close of school are quite notable. The buildings are being conditioned for the fall.
